

A Sincere Letter to Women ...

Please
Don't Leave Your Men Behind !

I acknowledge that this article might be controversial for some people. I appreciate the editors for being brave enough to publish it and I honour the readers for being open-minded enough to read it. This is an important subject, especially during these tumultuous times. I believe our relationships are under a lot of extra stress right now... financial worries, pandemic scares and a long list of other challenging situations are turning up the heat in our lives. Many people are aware that the perceived world chaos is actually part of a beautiful and loving divine plan that requires us to move forward with faith, patience and persistence in all areas of our lives. I feel that women are more aware of this shift in consciousness and for the most part, are embracing the changes. Many men, on the other hand, are confused by the shift - feeling threatened by the changes. So this is a request directed to women - please do not leave your men behind, (or vice versa in some cases).

Our relationships are an important part of the divine plan and right now, they desperately need some tender loving care. So many are in jeopardy! This is an important time to exercise faith, patience and persistence. Some of you might be thinking, "But you don't know my husband. He is stubborn, lazy, and a pain in the butt and I don't have a thread of patience left in my body." You are right, I do not know your partner, but I'm a man and I do know that men need your help. I acknowledge that some relationships run their natural course and are destined to end. However if a relationship ends in a mutual understanding, then usually the karma around it was fulfilled and the partners can stay connected as friends.

Unfortunately, most breakdowns come with a lot of financial and emotional stress. The partners are often angry and vengeful. The post-relationship becomes a battleground for the "ex's" and a feeding frenzy as the sharks in suits pick away at the legal leftovers. Regardless of the circumstances that led to the relationship breakdown, -not enough time to make it work, -not enough effort on both partners parts, -a failure in one's obligation to be a loving partner...I am going to go out on a limb and suggest that many relationship breakdown because men do not grow spiritually at the same rate as women do. The partners literally grow apart. I make this observation based on thousands of interviews and informal discussions I have had with women at tradeshows and meetings, during my work with Syncrohearts. I learned a lot about relationships and the question that always came up was why are there so many 'single', spiritually minded women? Where did the men go?

This topic touches my heart because I have witnessed too many male friends who were "left behind". I admit, some of them chose to stay behind, but others were shocked when their partners said goodbye. The women in their lives had embarked on a fast track spiritual journey. The men were intimidated by their partner's new found power and wisdom. They felt isolated and lost in the sanctuary that their women had entered. Some were curious, some got mad and some gave up. They felt they could not keep up. Ladies we need your help. I know it's a lot to ask... to hold our hands, guide us and help us grow. Try to be patient with us as we learn to be comfortable with the Goddess energy that is rising within and expanding around the planet.

In the reality CBC TV program, "The Day the Women Left Town", it was comical to watch the men struggle on their own. On the other hand, it was rather sad to see how we need to be in desperate situations before we appreciate each other. I think it is safe to say that partners must grow together to ensure survival, and I believe we can help each other do that. If we are all one, then we have a responsibility to help our partner grow. If we leave them behind, we might leave a piece of ourselves with them. And if you are a man don't be afraid to ask for help. It takes a strong person to do that; it is not a sign of weakness, it is a sign that your love is strong and true and willing to DO what needs to be done to make it work!
