I Choose to End All War in My Life . . .

There have been so many events of war over the years and there has been a resounding need within me to focus on what war looks like and to get some clarity about my responsibilities for the greater good and the healing of my world.

To that end, I resolve to end all war in my life. As I think about this idea, I realize by ending all war in my own personal life I can begin to release the fear. I can begin to rebuild relationships, end conflict, eliminate criticism and understand my own anger, thereby ending the hi-jacking of my own emotional and spiritual well-being.

My clients have expressed concern that one's personal problems seem so petty compared to the losses around the world. At one level this is certainly true, however, at what point can I begin to make a difference? I suggest we adopt the environmental slogan—“Think Globally – Act Locally”.

The more I heal myself the more I heal the world. As an emissary of light, I am excited to be part of this global shift in consciousness – we are connected collectively to the global suffering and can now begin in our own lives to “Make a Difference” through the healing power of love!

Open your heart to forgiveness and welcome new levels of love and connection. Release the judgements and hold yourself accountable for holding the light of loving consciousness.

Today I . . .

Choose to end all war in my life
Release the need for criticism and judgements

Am willing to love and accept everyone exactly as they are.

I Believe in the power of love.

And so it is.
